THE NATION'S LOSS

The death of Hon. J. A. Robb is a blow to Canada, to the Government, to the movement, and to Canadians of all parts of the Dominion. No Canadian Minister of Finance ever encountered so difficult a situation as confronted him. He was a man who, despite his difficulties, did a difficult situation better. The country was loaded with an appalling debt, conditions were stagnant, and the spirit of enterprise at a low ebb. Mr. Robb's financial acumen, his statesmanship, and his tact, found the money to meet the debt obligations, stimulated new life in production and trade, and revived hope and confidence throughout the country. Canada owes him a debt of gratitude. The remarkable change that has been brought about in the public finances, in economic conditions, and in the temper and outlook of our people, within the last half century.

Mr. Robb belonged to that class of high-minded and public-spirited men from which Canada is privileged to draw most of its cabinet ministers. His private life was exemplary. His devotion to duty was uncomproachable. His devotion to duty was uncompromising. He gave to Canada all that he had to give, as private citizen and Minister of Finance, and more than many can give. He was invariably courteous, friendly always and toward all, and of those who sat with him in parliament there will be none to whom his passing does not bring the pang of a personal loss. To his colleagues in the Government, to the members of the Government itself, his death is a calamity, while from one coast to the other those who have followed the course of public affairs during the last decade will recognize that a shrewd counsellor has departed and that a steady hand has left the wheel.

TIME FOR ACTION

Municipal elections occur in Edmonton four weeks from yesterday. As yet the voters of the city are in almost complete ignorance as to what candidates are to be asked to vote for, and against.

Several names have been mentioned as possible entries in the mayoralty race. There has been talk of slate lists based on M.G.A.s and the Labor party for filling the sclerical vacancies. Practically nothing has been heard about nominees for the public and separate school boards. This is a serious handicap for next year's annual expenditure, which has yet been advertised, nor even passed by council. Nothing has been done to inform the public as to the incidence of the verdict they will be asked to pronounce on the various half-holiday proposals.

It is time that candidates for the various offices were getting definitely in the field and putting their views before the electors. It is time that the bylaws are being passed on various projects put in line for discussion, and time that steps were taken to acquaint the public with the ins and outs of the closing arrangements.

Edmonton will need next year in the city council, and also in the school boards, the most capable men who can be got to serve. That advantage the city cannot possess unless candidates make their platforms widely and thoroughly known. The candidate who has some definite policy to offer is put under the best handicaps. He must then be helped by the voters in time to have them threshed out. The advantage in such case is always with the one who can make a half dozen pleasant-sounding speeches on the eve of election, and then do nothing but sit and do nothing in particular. Delay is always on the side of the "flashy" candidate, against the one who has some specific and worth-while ideas to advance.

There is a limit to the amount of money that the city can safely borrow, the city council should have decided long ago what capital expenditures it will require for the next year, and then the necessary bonds and notes put into the projects before the tax-payers. If council has not been able to make up its mind on that subject, with a whole year to think about it, the voters are not being fairly treated with the ones that are asked to consider a snap judgment in two or three weeks. The danger in such circumstances is that the voters will be governed by temperament rather than by a reasoned consideration of the various projects; that they will either pass the lot or vote down the entire list, according to impulse or temporary conditions.

With many improvements known to be needed, opportunity should be given to the voters to look into the improvement program in detail and to exercise what measure of discrimination between one proposal and another may seem to be wise. Council's present position has already cut down the opportunity needlessly and to a somewhat dangerous degree. It should lose no time in making up the list, passing the bylaws, and then the taxpayers can move with certainty what expenditures they are to be asked to sanction.

Council has done nothing as yet to accept the election of the large effect of the winter day closing plan. All that the man on the street knows is that the clerks want the half-holiday and that the merchants, or some of them are opposed to the voluntary closing. On the question of whether to bring business to Edmonton, or drive business away, he has been given no authoritative information. Apparently the man on the street, which one never knows nor cares very much about, and which for some reason is not at all anxious to have brought into discussion. But inasmuch as everybody in the city lives on the business of the city, it is a subject about which the voter should be as completely informed as possible if the intention is that he shall give a decision that will be for Edmonton and not against it.

There will have to be some fast work at the city hall during the next few days if the vote on the money bylaws and the vote on the day closing plan are not to devolve into inconclusive muteness.

And some fast work on the part of candidates and their organizations if next year's council and school boards are to be composed of men who have selected among those offering, on the basis of the respective policies and proposals they put before the electors.

Unanswered Prayer

By EDGAR A. GUEST

Do you grant my every wish?
Grant my great love for him?
Do you know, well I need.
Grant my desire, he pleads?
As his father, day by day?
Do you let him have his papa?

Father, tender, old, worn,
Thine eyes see through my eyes,
Do you hear his sullen voice,
Do you feel his pain, his woes?
And at times deny his plea?

For the good he has given?

Must you not, in little appear
To me, like a mother, dear?

When come pleasure you prevent
Do you feel my love, my intent?
Are you aware you do not pray?

When we cry as children small
To you, we are safe, we're well,
May I not denry your plea?

When all our playmen seem vain
For the future's greater gain?
